

Words like inequality, along with corporate profits and wealth have become almost like a form of profanity in the progressive political arena. The popular phrase to worship now has become: “Redistribution of wealth!!!”

As we all know, the founding fathers of this great venture called the United States of America pursued their endeavor with full knowledge that it would only survive by applying Judeo-Christian morals and ethics. Translation: Don't let fear driven selfishness dominate your emotions. Without morality and ethical behavior our capitalistic free enterprise economy is not much better than socialism.

I believe the most difficult of all the basic facts we observe about humanity is that life simply is not fair. Compounding this fact is that so many think it should be fair. Some even think society should, magically, make it fair again. But they can't!!!

Too many generations of independent selfish choices made in the absence of God's incredible wisdom and counsel have caused these inequalities and compromised any possibility of reversing the effects of history's accumulated destructive choices.

We all observe extreme diversities like vast wealth and adverse poverty, with their accompanying questions, “How much is enough?” and “How can we let this happen?” We see life not being fair, birth defects, appearance, intelligence, athletic ability, hearing and sight deficiencies. Inequalities are everywhere; look in the mirror.

Of course we must always help the helpless who are unable to provide their own care and survival, but many who are able have no incentive to pursue a purpose. They have caught that very common disease I call “Get-by-itus.”

Bottom line, we're all different and that's how God intended it to be. His plan was, and remains, to create each of us to pursue specific purposes. However, satanically driven fear and selfish choices in our heritages, along with current environmental circumstances and decisions, diminish humanity's ability to perform at a level our Lord desires.

I can name several billionaires who have added value to my life. I don't know of even one street person who has done that for me. “Redistribution” sounds like such a kind, gentle, loving term, but I can't think of a more cruel thing to do in a society than to take all incentive away from those who are pursuing a purpose, unless it is to introduce a fear of punishment for wanting to succeed.

Metaphorically, it's like the goose that lays eggs. Simply stated, do we want to eat the goose and have one good dinner, or encourage producing eggs with a continuing plan to hatch more geese while providing eggs for our breakfasts?

Distorted reasoning perceives that wealth is a fixed commodity, while in reality, in a free enterprise, capitalistic economy, wealth grows with the incentive to produce products or service. Wealth is never a static quantity where, if someone gains it's perceived to be someone else's loss. No, never; wealth will produce more wealth, and when we pursue those specific purposes God has placed within us, we can all be winners and produce more winners along the way. I like billionaires who don't love money!!!
