

Most people, when desiring improvements in their lives, only visualize changing outwardly. It's all about appearance and behavior modifications to create a more acceptable image for others to evaluate. Frequently this desire to improve is stimulated by subtle subconscious efforts to address hidden fear driven self-worth challenges.

Authentic Spiritual Transformation always happens on the inside. It's about admitting our intellectual fears (carnal from birth) to the Eternal Holy Spirit.

This dynamic humility initiates the beginning of a life changing relationship that will reveal new purposes, attitudes and habits. That is precisely what Authentic Transformation is. We will only pass on that which our Lord places within us. Only the authentically transformed person is motivated to model Authentic Transformation for others to follow.

When this occurs, a new expression of 'joy' will reveal who we've become, rather than just an intermittent emotional reflection from time to time. We may experience small hints of joy when we've helped someone, but when we become cognitive recipients of 'GRACE' as a great new unearned 'POSITION OF BLAMELESS WORTHINESS' and 'SPIRITUAL AUTHORITY', our transformational joy will become more than just an external expression or a personality trait. Joy then possesses us as genuine transformational recipients as it becomes who we are, more than just what we do.

So, is this Authentic Transformation readily available to us? The answer: Yes and no! No, not in an overpowering emotional way that strong desires or sexual pleasures do. Authentic transformation will not normally hold us captive against our will.

And, yes, authentic transformation can be ours when we choose to purge perpetually dwelling on our needs, desires and fears, and become open recipients of spiritual enlightenment. That's when we will experience possessing our Lord's Holy Spirit. That's when transformation becomes who we are rather than demonstrations of emotions or personality traits.

Let's practice gratitude as a valid step toward an Authentic Transformation and cease comparing equities and inequities. We must accept who we are, warts and all, and prepare for the journey ahead. We must obtain a proper perspective on how unimportant present circumstances and situations are in comparison to the promises of a Christ filled eternity. Dedicate the rest of life to placing bright colors on what we have. So many miss the blessings of their life while restlessly pursuing the life others have. Life is not fair; we need to accept it and live the transformed life joyously.

We can endure devastating inequities when we become enlightened with the spiritual wisdom that allows us to contemplate eternal benefits by experiencing a transformed life now. The best way to cultivate faith in that dream is to let it dominate life now. Remember, life's not fair; get over it!!!
